REPUBLICAN NOMINATION.
FOR PRESIDENT,
Abraham Lincoln,
OF ILLINOIS.
FOR VICE-PRESIDENT,
Hannibal Hamlin,
OF MAINE.

The Extremists.
Wendell Phillips calls Abraham Lincoln, the Republican candidate for the Presidency, "a Constitutional slave found." The Abolitionists of the North, and the Secessionists of the South, are not far asunder. The one, it is true, is hostile to Slavery, while the other favors it; but they agree in denying their allegiance to the Constitution of the United States, and in the principles of construction to be applied to that instrument. The Secessionists assert, in the name of State Rights, the power of the local authorities to imprison, and sell, free colored men; and the Abolitionists assert the power in the same authorities to pass personal liberty bills to neutralize the power of the Federal officers. Each thinks the Union not worth preserving; and neither have much common sense or patriotism; and it is a great pity that both classes could not be compelled to live together in Utah, or form a "happy family" in some distant State.

Connecticut Politics.

If our readers wish to see political papers in earnest, we recommend to them to take a look at the Hartford Times, New Haven Register, Bridgeport Farmer, Middleton Sentinel, and the New London Star. We have had a presentment though the summer, that the quiet style of writing adopted by the Editors of these different papers, was a precursor of something partaking of the opposite character, albeit that something was carefully concealed from the public eye, that it was but the slumbering of the volcano, which would soon break forth in terrible power; the peculiar ominous quiet, which precedes the fearful storm.

It appears now, that the storm was let loose, that the volcano broke forth, that, that something came to the surface in full view of an excited, startled people, at the late Democratic State Convention; and the immediate cause of this disturbance of the "electric equilibria," was, that body's unqualified endorsement of Douglas. A new Convention was immediately called to nominate Breckenridge electors, and held its session at New Britain, on the 12th inst. Above, are laboring with full strength, and increasing zeal, and it appears as if there would be a "time" in Connecticut.

If politicians were like other people, reasonable persons, and had some care for consistency in conduct, we should say, that New York might fuse as much as it pleased, but in Connecticut, fusion is impossible. Yet we remember, that in the former state the politicians and their papers have within a week, scouted the very idea of fusion, and before the ink on the papers was dry, the thing was done. We have a better opinion of Connecticut politicians than we have of those of New York; but we fear they are too near that great center of political corruption to have continued to this late day uncontaminated. The Breckenridge men were treated ungenerously, unfairly, at the late convention, and we hope they will show a proper sense of dignity, by resolute and per-severant action; but we fear the strain upon the back-bone will be too much. We shall see, what we shall see.

We clip the following from the Hartford Daily Post:

Mr. Buchanan, says the New York Express, is about to call "off his dogs in New York." The organization there is nearly absorbed. What will be done with the Rats of Connecticut? Our poor Jack rat, if somebody, somewhere, somehow doesn't feed them, and soon, they will not be worth export even to vermin-eating China. Our neighbor of the Times, for example. What a snub he would consider if it were to come at last to be thought not fit for the dinner table of a Mandarin in the Celestial City.

THE RAT MARKET OF CONNECTICUT.—The rat market is dull. A great deal of "gas" among holders. Much speculation among the Rats as to how to avoid the Douglas terror. Whistling to keep up their courage. Outsiders, more and more shy. It is question among these Rats, what are they? If they are neither Republicans nor Democrats, what are they? Considered generally by the sensible, as a low order of the fancies. It is rumored, also, that the administration is trembling in the knees. This produces no depreciation; however, inasmuch as there have never been any bids. We can only, therefore, remain, "quotations as heretofore, and steady at that." We a vine the holders to tell us what the stock is. What are they? A penny, Mr. Time, for a reply.

Decidedly complimentary to the "Breckenridge party."

"How pleasant the too see."

ROYALTY SLAYED IN THE FACE.—While the Prince of Wales was being escorted through the streets of London, C. W., on Thursday, his carriage was delayed by the crowd, who cheered vociferously. One tall, thin man, while shouting at the top of his voice, and waving a shocking bad hat in the air, slapped the Prince's face in the face, much to the astonishment of the young gentleman who, however, seeing that it was done in his honor, laughed it off as a good joke, though he afterwards confessed that it was the first time he had seen stars in the daytime on this side of the water.

BRIG LOST, SEVEN PERSONS DROWNED.—ONE SAVED.—In the gale of Sunday last, which was quite severe on the Atlantic coast, the brig Mary Pierce, Capt. Clifford, from Bangor bound for this port, with a cargo of lumber consigned to Messrs. Pierce and Rowland, was capsized about twelve miles east of Chatham Light, Cape Cod. There were on board, the captain, mate, steward, four hands, and the captain's son, an intelligent lad about seven years of age.

This was about nine o'clock in the forenoon. When the vessel capsized, she lay on her beam ends, and while in this position, the crew made endeavors to get out lumber for the purpose of making rafts, but before this could be entirely accomplished, she rolled entirely over. The captain and steward got to a boat, leaving the mate and crew on the bottom of the brig in the water. The mate, Frank Varnum, 21 years of age and without family, was the only one known to have been saved. Varnum clung to the wreck, and kept the captain's child with him until the poor boy died from exposure and was washed away. He kept his place upon the wreck by thrusting his knife into a worm-eaten spot upon the keel, and "holding on." During the day one after another of his comrades was washed off or died from chill, the storm raging with great fury.

Once or twice he was washed from the wreck, but managed to sustain his hold, till the British schooner Robert H. Dexter, Capt. A. H. Dexter, from Nova Scotia to this port with plaster of Paris, came to his rescue and took him from the wreck. When taken off he was too much exhausted to speak, and had not fully recovered from his exposure when brought into this port today in the Robert H. Dexter. It is believed that all the rest of the crew were lost, as the sea was running too high to allow the boat in which the captain and steward attempted to escape to live any length of time.—New Haven Palladium.

PLAYING FOR LINCOLN'S ELECTION.—The Washington Sun (Breckenridge) says it is well known by many here that Douglas and his managers are bent on securing Lincoln's election, in the belief that if he be elected the Douglas interest will come up as the regular Democratic organization; and that Douglas will thus manage to succeed him (Lincoln) in the Presidency. None of them entertain the least idea that Douglas can possibly be elected now; and they labor to prevent the election from going to the House of Representatives by any possible chance. Hence their persistent opposition to fusion tickets in Connecticut, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, which States they desire to secure to Lincoln, beyond peradventure. They consented to the proposition to fuse with the Bell interest in New York, because believing it certain that Lincoln can carry that State over any possible combination that may be made against him. They are anxious to give Virginia, North Carolina, Maryland and Tennessee to Bell, so as that the Breckenridge cause may appear after the election to have been as weak at the South as at the North. They seek to secure such a result as one of the means of aiding their scheme of assumption party opposition to the administration of Lincoln, whose election, as explained above, they seek to make sure beyond any possible contingency.

Will the Union be Endangered by Lincoln's Election?
[From the Chicago Journal.]

Some of the more reckless of the Democratic alarmists continue to hold up the scare-crow of disunion, to frighten the supporters of Lincoln. A Douglas-Bell organ now before us, for instance, declares that "if Lincoln is elected, let the Black Republicans be now forewarned that a dissolution of the Union is inevitable."

But Douglas told us, in his Norfolk (Virginia) speech, that the election of Lincoln would not be a justifiable cause for the South to dissolve the Union—and there was "great applause."

Mr. Breckenridge, in his Lexington speech the other day, denied in the most indignant terms that he or his partisans were in favor of dissolving the Union under any circumstances—and the declaration was "loudly applauded."

Mr. Bell is the Union-candidate par excellence, and of course would not countenance disunion, whether elected, as he does not hope to be, or defeated, as he expects to be.

And Mr. Lincoln would not permit anybody to dissolve the Union while he was President, but, in the spirit of Old Jackson, would string up as high as Haman any traitor who should attempt so unpardonable a crime.

Inasmuch, then, as all the candidates of the several parties are thus avowedly pledged to stand by the Union, we may dismiss all fears of a National catastrophe when Lincoln shall become President. We advise all the setters up of the ragged and worn-out old scare-crow of disunion to quiet their nerves. That dodge is essentially "played out."

Novel Articles of Faith.

A cynical old codger who has kept his eyes open, ventures in this wise:

I begin to believe that now-a-days, money makes the man, and dress the gentleman.

I begin to believe that the purse is more potent than the sword and pen put together.

I begin to believe that those who sin the most during the week are the most devout on Sundays.

I begin to believe that honesty is the best policy—to speculate with, until you gain everybody's confidence—then line your pockets.

I begin to believe in humbugging people out of their dollars. It is neither stealing nor begging—and those who are humbugged have themselves to blame.

I begin to believe that a piano-forte in a family is more necessary than meat and potatoes.

I begin to believe that a boy who doesn't swear, smoke and chew tobacco, may be a very good boy, but naturally stupid.

I begin to believe that he has the most merit who makes the most noise in his own behalf.

Finally, I begin to believe that few who consult a looking glass find the face of an honest man reflected therein.

A correspondent has recently visited Ralph Farnham, said to be the sole survivor of the battle of Bunker Hill. He resides at Acton, Maine, and was 104 years old on the 7th of July. The following report of the old gentleman's conversation will entertain the reader:

"I was working on the farm," commenced the old gentleman, "when the news came of the troubles with the British. A good many lads enlisted, and I felt like 'isting as well as the rest; but my mother didn't like to hear of my going away. However, she suspected something, and one day she saw me cleaning my musket. 'Ralph,' she says 'you ain't gone and 'listed?' 'Not just yet, mother,' I said. Still she was uneasy, and I see her go to a neighbor whose son had gone down to Boston to join the army. I followed her, and when I got to the house I heard her crying. 'I was sorry then, but it was too late. The next day I and a lot of others were marched to join the army; at Cambridge, where General Washington had just come to take command. On the road the people came out of their houses and cheered us, and at An-over Colonel Abbot treated the officers, and sent us out some elder and grog in pails. We got to Cambridge, and the next day were marched to Charlestown, and the Battle of Bunker Hill was fought. Ah! that was a terrible, bloody fight! It was a shocking slaughter! 'Twas the first time I had ever seen a battle. After that I fought with the army through three campaigns, from 1775 to 1777. I often saw Washington. He was a fine man. We don't see such fine men as General Washington these days. And old Putnam! he was a rough old fellow, but as brave as a lion; he cared for nobody nor nothing. And Gates—he was a brave man, too, though he made no show. I was present at the surrender of Burgoyne. I was on guard at the camp where Burgoyne and the other British officers dined with Gates after the surrender. They were all very merry, for all they had been whipped. Gates sat at the head of the table; and there was some laughing done where Burgoyne was seated, and Gates wanted to know what it was about. Somebody said, 'General Burgoyne says you look more like an old woman than a soldier—General.' 'Do I?' says Gates, laughing. 'Well, perhaps I do. I've delivered General Burgoyne of 10,000 children at any rate,' and they all laughed heartily. Gates got the best of the Britisher. After the war was over, I came and settled on this farm. It cost $2 an acre, and I had a hundred acres. It was all a wilderness then—nothing but forest for miles around, and the woods were full of bears, and other wild animals; the bears often molested me, and I shot a good many. One day I was in the woods with nothing but my ax, when a bear dropped from a tree close by; presently another came down the tree, and after staring at me they all made off, and I let 'em go. Once I killed a moose-deer close by my log hut. It weighed 600 pounds! I lived in the log hut by myself for four years, and then I got married, and after while built this house just above where the log-cabin's stood. I have had seven children; five of them are still living. Sixty years ago I joined the Free-Will Baptists, and I've been a member of the church ever since."

SMOKING IN NEW YORK.—Some figurative genius has been summing up the number of smokers, in that city. According to his estimate, there are two hundred thousand smokers who consume two cigars a day, making a total consumption of four hundred thousand cigars—and these, at the average price of four cents, amount to five millions four hundred and eighty thousand dollars annually. There's vapor for you. Talk about the Fourth of July and shooting money away! Here are millions of dollars smoked up; bankable funds converted into clouds, floating about the ceilings of lager-beer saloons; passing through the changes from "out and dry" ashes, and through the filthy blackened stems of pipes into the mouths of the peep, and from thence out to—nothing. Millions of sensible people devoted not to Bacchus alone, but to a worse god—Tobacco. Awful, isn't it? Suppose all of this grand army of smokers should give a simultaneous whiff in Broadway, wouldn't we have a slight specimen of a London fog, or of the appearance of the atmosphere immediately surrounding a battle-field after the discharge of a score of twenty-four pounders. Imagine the stumps cast away by this legion of puffers, all gathered together in one heap, for the consideration of Delevar, or the tobaccoists who are engaged in manufacturing snuff. The Great Eastern wouldn't be a circumstance to that pile, and even Mount Blanc's magnitude would suffer in comparison. Surely the query of "what becomes of the stumps?" should read "what becomes of the stumps?" Let the ashes from the cigars consumed in that city be collected in one vast heap, then carried in carts to Central Park, and distributed evenly over its surface. The result wouldn't be very comfortable to the promenaders, we take it.

A letter from Trieste in the London Morning Star, gives an account of an extraordinary attempt on the part of the second captain of the Austrian man-of-war Kaiser to blow up the vessel, with every soul on board, the whole of the ships lying in the neighborhood, the yacht of the Archduke Maximilian and all his company, together with the greater part of the town of Trieste. This Austro-Italian Guy Faux was, it will be seen, discovered at the critical moment, and blew out his brains.

The bark Weathergauge was seized in New York on Wednesday, under suspicion of being a slave. Her manifest set forth that she was bound to Hong Kong by way of Amoy, which is well known to be a slave station on the African coast. The cargo consisted of rice, powder, rum, blue drills, and articles usually taken out by slaves. Capt. Farmer, of the revenue cutter Harriet Lane, took charge of the bark, and the Collector notified the authorities at Washington.

I begin to believe that the best remedy for hard times and a tight money market is an extravagant expenditure on the part of individuals—to keep the money moving.

I begin to believe that none but knaves are qualified to hold office under Government—with the exception of a few natural born fools and lunatics.

I begin to believe that man was not made to enjoy life, but keep himself miserable in the pursuit and possession of riches.
